

JIS

JIS

JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL SERVICE

Volume 23 | Number 1 | Spring 2014

“When a man has done what he considers to be his duty to his people and his country, he can rest in peace.”

- Nelson Mandela

VOLUME 23 | NUMBER 1 | SPRING 2014

JIS

Peacetime Crisis: Violent Crime and Community-Oriented Policing in Guatemala

Katie Sizemore

Hydro-Hegemony in Hokkaido: Foreign Purchase of Underground Water on Contested Land

Tara Sun Vanacore

Beyond Possession: Private Property and Land Tenure Reform in a Human Rights-Based Approach to Development in Rwanda

R. A. Lord

Shanghai Cooperation Organization as a Counterbalance to NATO

Alena Sakhonchik

Pakistan's Shifting Discourse on Climate Change at the United Nations Security Council

Joe Thwaites

Formalizing Informal Enterprise in the Republic of Georgia

Shawn V. Woodley

Shale Gas and the Future of EU-Russian Energy Security

Natalia Suvorova

Preventing Mass Atrocities: A Three-Pronged Approach to Comprehensive Prevention

Mike Brand

JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL SERVICE
School of International Service
American University
Washington, DC

MISSION

The Journal of International Service is committed showcasing graduate student research at the School of International Service, featuring subjects in the fields of: comparative and regional studies, international communication, international development, environmental politics, international economics, peace & conflict resolution studies, global governance, and U.S. foreign policy. The Journal began in 1891 under the name Swords and Plowshares. The philosophy of the School of International Service is a milestone in civilization's journey toward an international community based on mutual understanding and respect, a philosophy that the Journal of International Service strives to promote.

SUBMISSIONS

Publication in the Journal of International Service provides students with an excellent opportunity to contribute to their fields and enhance their academic experience. Authors must be Master's or Ph.D. students currently enrolled at the School of International Service, or alumni that have graduated within a year of the current submission deadline. Papers representing all tracks at the School are accepted.

STAFF

Co-Editors-in-Chief
Margaret Ledyard-Marks
John Lo Forese
Forrest McGraw

Editorial Staff
Jessica Atlas
TJ Bradley
Lisa Guetzkow
Owen Hauck
Anne-Isaure Joncheray
Gabriella Krohmal
Charlie Piggott
Mayesha Quasem
Ashley Richardson
Philip Sweigart
Lauren Walker

Submit papers to americanujis@gmail.com
Visit us online at www.american.edu/sis/jis

© Copyright 2014 Journal of International Service
Most rights reserved.

