

JIS

JIS

JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL SERVICE

Volume 23 | Number 2 | Fall 2014

“Let us look beyond the confines of the current development model towards forms of development that may be less lucrative, but truly promote equitable benefits, human rights, and environmental sustainability.”

- Jessica Brietfeller
The Last of the Kings:
The Political-Cultural Implications of Hydroelectricity in Naso Territory, Bocas, Panama

VOLUME 23 | NUMBER 2 | FALL 2014

The Last of the Kings: The Political-Cultural Implications of Hydroelectricity in Naso Territory, Bocas, Panamá Jessica Breitfeller

Breaking Apart the Petro State: Can the Oil Curse Be Applied to Coups? Brendan Connell

The Political Economy of Rigorous Impact Evaluations in International Development: A Micro-Macro Perspective Sarah Custer-Lalanne

The Role of NGOs in Mitigating the Impact of the Interoceanic Highway Samuel Goodman

Thailand’s Path Towards Democracy? Kyle Livingston

Combating the Effects of War and Instability on Archaeology in Afghanistan Emily Mella

Revising the German Prostitution Law While Aiming at the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Prostitution Joyce M. Muyunvi

Evaluating Secondary Impacts of Subsidized Youth Vocational Training on Participants’ Households: The Evidence from a Randomized Control Trial in Colombia Martha Viveros

JIS

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY
WASHINGTON, DC

School of International Service | American University
www.american.edu/sis/jis

JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL SERVICE
School of International Service
American University
Washington, DC

MISSION

The Journal of International Service is committed showcasing graduate student research at the School of International Service, featuring subjects in the fields of: comparative and regional studies, international communication, international development, environmental politics, international economics, peace & conflict resolution studies, global governance, and U.S. foreign policy. The Journal began in 1891 under the name Swords and Plowshares. The philosophy of the School of International Service is a milestone in civilization's journey toward an international community based on mutual understanding and respect, a philosophy that the Journal of International Service strives to promote.

SUBMISSIONS

Publication in the Journal of International Service provides students with an excellent opportunity to contribute to their fields and enhance their academic experience. Authors must be Master's or Ph.D. students currently enrolled at the School of International Service, or alumni that have graduated within a year of the current submission deadline. Papers representing all tracks at the School are accepted.

STAFF

Co-Editors-in-Chief
Margaret Ledyard-Marks
John Lo Forese
Forrest McGraw

Editorial Staff
Jessica Atlas
TJ Bradley
Lisa Guetzkow
Owen Hauck
Anne-Isaure Joncheray
Gabriella Krohmal
Charlie Piggott
Mayesha Quasem
Ashley Richardson
Philip Sweigart
Lauren Walker

Submit papers to americanujis@gmail.com
Visit us online at www.american.edu/sis/jis

© Copyright 2014 Journal of International Service
Most rights reserved.

